Cards for the Troops

To soldiers stationed overseas, a one-of-a-kind handmade card is a symbolic item that represents why they're fighting.

Janette Smith, whose husband is stationed in Afghanistan, said cards serve as an extra boost of motivation, reminding soldiers where they came from and why they're doing what they're doing.

"Their lifeline is any correspondence from home," Smith said, noting that her husband, Major Nicholas Cipparone, left for Afghanistan March 16 and is set to be stationed there a year.

That's why Smith said she was thrilled when she heard the staff at Le Terrian's Playground, Bardstown, had its students create and design their own cards as a way of saying "thank you" to soldiers Wednesday morning. The unit in which Cipparone works is set to receive the cards.

"I was so happy when I heard that," Smith said. "It made my day."

According to Mary Sheckles, owner of Le Terrian's Playground, this is the first year the students at Le Terrian's have written letters to the troops.

"It's a good activity for the kids to learn about the soldiers," Sheckles said.

Older students at Le Terrian's wrote their own personal letter to the troops. Young students had a small thank-you

Companies seek a percentage of dairy farmers' settlement

Settlement filings must be received by May 1

Two defendants have settled in a class-action lawsuit involving more than 7,000 dairy farmers throughout the southeastern United States. But with the May 1 deadline fast approaching for farmers to claim their settlements, many in Nelson County and throughout the region are receiving letters from companies that want a percentage of those claims.

Farmers' advocates have warned that many of these companies propose to charge farmers a third of their settlement, just for helping them fill out a two-page form.

More than a dozen defendants and alleged co-conspirators are still listed in the class-action suit, which alleges that companies were involved in price-fixing, "flooding" the milk market, restricting milk producers' access to bottling plants and other illegal activities.

Dean Foods Co. settled for $140 million and Southern Marketing Agency Inc. settled for $5 million.

Warren and Donna Cheek, owners of Cheek's Dairy Farm in Cox's Creek, have received correspondence from at least four companies offering to help them recover their settlement.

At first, they were getting phone calls. Then they started receiving letters on official letterhead from those same companies.

"At first — you know, it looked so legal," Donna Cheek said. But she became suspicious when she saw that some of the companies included forms in which the farmer would sign over lim-

City's Sunday alcohol sales law not specific enough for state

JENNIFER CORBETT
jcorbett@kystandard.com

Due to unspecific wording, state officials required the City of Bardstown to modify the wording in its Alcoholic Beverages Ordinance to allow the distribution of alcohol on Sundays.

Bardstown Mayor Bill Sheckles introduced the first reading of an amendment, which would formally allow the sale of alcohol on Sundays, during the Bardstown City Council meeting Tuesday night.

The change to the Alcoholic Beverages Ordinance would allow a person to sell alcohol on the weekend only if a temporary permit was obtained.

In the original version of the ordinance, there were no specifications on temporary alcohol sales.

According to Sheckles, state officials began to review ordinances and found that the wording in the original version of the ordinance did not specify that people had to obtain a temporary permit to sell alcohol on Sundays.

Since Sheckles is designated as the Alcoholic Beverage Coordinator, every alcohol permit that is applied for within the city goes through him.

He noted that the new amendment would coincide

Online GED scams have hit Nelson County

Only a state can administer the exam

JENNIFER CORBETT
jcorbett@kystandard.com

A consumer alert has been issued warning citizens of the dangers of using fraudulent websites that claim to offer genuine high school and GED diplomas for a small fee.

The Kentucky adult education unit of the Council on Postsecondary Education issued the warning after many of the GED recipients from the websites found that their GED was invalid.

According to Belinda Carter, director of Bardstown-Nelson County Adult and Community Education, this scam has hit a few students in Nelson County.

Carter said one student received the GED online, and tried to enroll in college classes but was turned away when college officials said her GED was void.

The issue of GED scams on the Internet isn't something that has recently been gaining speed, as Carter said she has seen the issue affect some students for the past few years.

She added that the scams are now garnering more attention, so many states are recognizing the issue.

According to a press release from Kentucky.gov, only a state may issue a GED test. The tests are not available online, as the websites have claimed. The seven-hour exam is administered at official GED testing centers — for example the Bardstown-Nelson County Adult and Community Education.

Carter noted that the only way to receive a GED in Nelson County is to go through the Bardstown-

Historic preservation requires communication, leaders who listen

ERIN L. MCCOY
emccoy@kystandard.com

Bardstown may be back at the forefront of the historic preservation field after a local man's doctoral dissertation explored leadership in the local preservation movement.

Peter Trzop

Peter Trzop earned his Doctor of Education in Organizational Leadership from Argosy University in December. Throughout his education, Trzop said he's been drawn back to his roots: as a graduate student he wrote his thesis on historic preservation in Bardstown. So in completing his doctoral capstone, he decided to explore that topic again from a leadership perspective.

"I grew up in Bardstown," Trzop said. "It's obviously a very historic place that has ... a very powerful influence on you."

As it turned out, it was a new idea in the field of leadership studies.

"We found gaps in understanding how leadership — and I'm not talking management, I'm talking leadership — how leadership works in a successful district like the one in Bardstown," said Dr. Randy Heinrich, Trzop's dissertation chair. "What we see is largely a gap in how do you train leaders in historic preservation to get the big picture, to account for all the moving parts."

Heinrich added that the dissertation introduced him to the "unique challenges" involved in running a historic district.

The dissertation, titled "A Phenomenological Study of Emergent Historic Preservation Leadership Activities for the Bardstown, Kentucky, Historic District," interviews five "sub-groups": local "activist-historians," contractors, homeowners, nonprofit staff and planning and zoning staff on the most important qualities contributing to the success of a historic preservation movement.

In 1967, Bardstown passed the first historic-zoning legislation in Kentucky.

"Given that Bardstown is one of the first in the state and the first in the nation, it's only appropriate that this study, that is in many ways the first of its type, would propel Bardstown back into the limelight," Trzop said.

And Bardstown, where more than 300 structures have been preserved, proved a great place to initiate the study of what makes a great leader in the field.

"By all accounts Bardstown would be that successful district," Trzop said. "We have a lot of preserved houses. I think anybody in the HRB [Historical Review Board] would back that claim. I think a lot of people in business would back that claim, as well."

The Kentucky Department of Travel backs the claim, too, estimating that tourism has brought more than 1,300 jobs and more than $67 million in investments to Nelson County.

Priorities in leadership

Twenty-three local people were interviewed for the dissertation, though their names are kept anonymous as a way of encouraging honest responses. Trzop said it was never his intention to provide an outline for how preservationists "should" act — instead, he wanted to listen and learn.

But five themes were common to all five sub-groups of people Trzop interviewed: "1. increase community participation, education and communication relating to historic preservation; 2. reduce favoritism and subjectivity to increase consistency and fairness in the historic-preservation process; 3. economic consideration by leaders for historic-preservation work by property and business owners; 4. property rights versus historic-preservation zoning laws; 5. important attributes of leaders."

Increasing communication between different interests, such as contractors and the planning commission, seemed to be a central concern for many of those interviewed.

"It says, look, if you're going to have a meeting about historic review, maybe talk to these subgroups specifically — target them," Trzop explained. "Maybe government could communicate in more like a dialogue — more two-way communication."

He encouraged local leaders and those interested in historic preservation to read his dissertation as a way to gain insight into the perspectives of others. Call Trzop at 233-4585 or e-mail him at ptrzop@hotmail.com to learn more about obtaining a copy.

"A good leader might look at that and say, OK, that's something that people have talked about. ... How do we actually make this happen in the real world?" Trzop said. "We have been doing things very well, but we could always do better, and I think good leaders look at things like that."

These themes provide clues on why historic preservation is working in Bardstown, and helps researchers "see what people are doing on a local level," rather than simply theorizing, Trzop explained.

"I think Pete came out of it with an incredible, deep appreciation for how when you throw the pebble on a pond, the way the ripples ... affect people very differently," Heinrich said.

Local leadership

Trzop cited a number of local sources in his dissertation, including books by historian Dixie Hibbs, pamphlets from historian David Hall and articles from The Kentucky Standard.

Hibbs said, although she has not read the dissertation, keeping lines of communication open and encouraging leaders to listen are of resounding importance to the historic district's success.

More than anything, a preservationist must have a passion for historic preservation, she said, pointing to the work of her late husband, Franklin Hibbs Jr., who served on the HRB for 26 years.

"The interested people are willing to give their time — which is worth more than money most of the time," Hibbs said. "Preservationists are doing this for the love of the buildings and the atmosphere. They don't do it for money. They don't do it for glory."

When Hibbs was mayor of Bardstown in the early 2000s, she said that in the Historical Review Board, "there was definitely a movement toward more enforcement, less advice."

Joint City-County Planning Commission Director Janet Johnston-Crowe agreed.

"There needs to be added communication, and I think one thing that makes us different from other communities that also have historic zoning is that we've had historic zoning for so long that it's become more regulatory — 'This is what you have to do,'" she said.

This is not because historic zoning regulations have become stricter, she said: "There's nothing that says 'you shall.'"

Instead, there needs to be more public awareness about what historic zoning regulations try to accomplish — a role that has been filled through awareness campaigns by nonprofit or non-governmental groups in other communities.

"[There is a] perception that it is regulatory in nature, that there's not really a purpose for it," she said. "Because it's been in existence so long we don't have that buy-in that you would typically have by creation of a new district."

Providing expertise — suggesting paint colors, giving advice to contractors who haven't worked on old houses — without forcing particular decisions on people is the best approach, Hibbs said.

"Leadership is not standing by and saying, 'You apply to me and we'll say whether we accept it or not,'" Hibbs said. "Leadership is not dictatorship. It is gathering people together to come up with the right results. ... One person's ideas are good but 10 persons' ideas are 10 times better."

Heinrich suggested that as a result of Trzop's process of interviewing 23 community leaders, leaders might be thinking more critically about what contributes to Bardstown's success.

"Perhaps people are talking differently to each other today. Perhaps people are thinking about things a little differently, because his questions were very probing and very deep," Heinrich said.

This research is only the beginning, Trzop said. He hopes researchers will be inspired to study leadership in other historic preservation movements.

"We see this as a starting point, and maybe somebody else wants to study four or five other small towns," he said. "As that grows — that database — then you can make more claims, if you will."

"He was looking for and found trends that may eventually evolve into models or trends that will help us understand how to effectively run a historic district," Heinrich said.

Trzop said he has been approached by several parties to publish his dissertation as a book.

Dinner provides platforms for political figures

Luallen featured as keynote speaker

jcorbett@kystandard.com

For one evening, Democratic representatives and candidates will have an opportunity to discuss their political platforms with members of the community.

It's a part of the annual Nelson County Democratic Jefferson/Jackson Dinner, which is 6 p.m. Friday at the Maywood Country Club, 130 Maywood Ave. Tickets are $30 in advance or $35 at the door.

According to Margie Bradford, committee chairwoman of the Bardstown-Nelson County Democratic Executive Committee, the event is the annual fundraiser for the Democratic committee and the Nelson County Women's Club.

"It's an exciting evening," she said, noting that several prominent political figures will attend. For example, former State Auditor Crit Luallen will be featured as the keynote speaker.

During the first portion of the night, community members will be able to partake in a meet-and-greet with Democratic candidates and representatives during a cocktail reception.

A buffet dinner will be served at 7 p.m. and the program will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Once the program begins, Luallen will take the stage. In the past, she has served as secretary of the executive cabinet, state

Nat Rogers Road core samples collected

Qk4 engineering firm, which has been hired to design the renovation of a flood-prone stretch of Nat Rogers Road known as Bull Run, took core samples Thursday to determine the stability of the ground underneath the road and near where a 115-foot-long culvert is to be built, District 1 Magistrate Keith Metcalfe said. The county provided a bulldozer for the work. Qk4 is expected to complete the design soon. Taking the samples was part of the design process. “This will tell them how much steel they’ll need to put in the culvert, maybe how thick of walls they need,” Metcalfe said.

Flaget donation

Executive Director of the Nelson County Community Clinic Jan Tronzo, R.N., B.S.N., left, accepted a check for $15,000 from Flaget Memorial Hospital Chief of Medical Staff Dr. Mark Abramovich and former Flaget Foundation Director of Development Bobbi Harned, R.N., B.S.N. The donation, which was supplied by Flaget’s medical staff, will be used to further the work of the clinic, which offers free medical care, medicines and basic dental care to the working un-insured in Nelson County. Harned is the director of the Flaget Cancer Center.

Bradford added that other officials set to attend include Dick Heaton, a candidate for state representative in the 50th District, and current State Auditor Adam Edelen.

“It’s a rally type of event ... where local Democrats get together and have fun,” Bradford said, adding that the occasion provides an opportunity for the candidates to be heard in the community.

Bradford stressed that people from all political parties are welcome to attend the event.

“Anyone who wants to come, can come,” she said. “You don’t have to be a registered Democrat to attend.”

written for them that said, “Thank you for protecting me everyday. I love you and all that you do for me to be safe and free.”

Smith recalls how her husband described his living conditions in Afghanistan. Cipparone lives in a hut that doesn’t prevent bugs or snakes from coming inside. He works up to 16 hours a day and doesn’t have much time to correspond with loved ones.

In essence, any type of reminder from home gives Cipparone and his fellow soldiers the extra boost of spirit they need.

“(Cipparone and his fellow soldiers) plan to take the cards and put them on the walls. ... It will be their wallpaper,” Smith said, adding that children’s drawings serve as a reminder of where they came from.

In another way, the cards and drawings enhance an appreciation of the amenities the soldiers have at home.

“Our soldiers don’t have the comforts of home that we take advantage of,” Smith noted.

Most of all, Smith hopes

Nelson County Adult and Community Education. A student has to qualify to take the exam and must go through preliminary testing.

GED Testing Service has created a directory where people can get guidance in spotting suspicious claims from websites. The site has a list of fraudulent websites, information about how to determine legitimate accreditation, and an area to report suspected fraud.

The Kentucky Standard previously reported that the GED test system will undergo changes in January 2014. The new test will be paperless and require a basic level of computer skills. Test material will focus more on preparing students for college and career environments. Students will have to pay a $120 fee, which is up from the current cost of $60. Over a period of time testers can accumulate points over passed areas of a test and retake areas to meet the passing requirement. As of January 2014, all points acquired will be wiped clean.

For more information on how to sign up for a GED in Nelson County, visit the Bardstown-Nelson County Adult and Community Education at 407 S. Third St. or contact the center at (502) 331-8809. The center is open 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 6-9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

A desperate letter from Lisa

Sometimes I get letters or e-mails from people that make me want to spit tacks.

I'm not talking about critical letters. (Those make me want to hide under my covers, suck my thumb and cry.)

I'm talking about letters from people, from fellow Christians, who are sure God isn't blessed with them and who are desperate for a how-to to help them get back on track, to finally be faithful to God.

They beg for advice, for wisdom, for some secret to get them back into God's good graces, to win back his smile and approval so he won't order them to get out of his sight.

Lisa in Louisiana writes me every so often, sending her letters to me in care of my church. I think she found me through one of my books.

Her most recent letter made me crazy angry. Not at her! Rather, at whoever has been telling her that she has to be v-e-r-y careful of what she does, thinks and says, that there's a point she can't cross (although no one will tell her what that point is) or she risks losing her salvation.

She's depressed, worried, fearful. She wants to know how to pray, how to be "on fire for God." She confessed to me that she's not and that when she goes to church she feels she has to hide how she really feels (and, therefore, who she really is).

She said she's living a lie

NANCY KENNEDY

GUEST COLUMNIST
nkennedy@chronicleonline.com

at church, that "mostly everyone thinks I'm doing good."

"Plus," she said, "I am not into God, but I want to be."

She added, "I don't want to backslide again because I don't want to go to hell."

She feels alone in her faith and is afraid to talk with anyone in her church, so she wrote to me, a stranger 900 miles away.

While I'm honored and humbled, I'm also angry. She should be talking with her friends at her church — or her pastor. What does it say about a church where its members are afraid to be themselves, to be honest about their lack of zeal and their need for encouragement? What does that say about the leadership, the pastors and teachers, when the people feel condemned — condemned by God?

"There is, therefore, no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus" (Romans 8:1). Can it be any clearer? No condemnation.

None. Zero.

We take something so simple as "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish, but have eternal life" (John 3:16) and we add caveats and stipulations, fine print at the bottom of the page, exceptions and rules, hurdles to jump over, hoops to jump through.

We take God's gifts of grace and mercy and rest and peace and turn them into a strategic system of rules and regulations. In some churches, the people care more about the length of a woman's skirt than her struggle with understanding the concept of "no condemnation."

In some churches, the appearance of holiness is more important than showing mercy to one another, gathering knowledge more superior than serving one another with kindness.

In some churches (not all or even most, but some), women like Lisa from Louisiana feel they have nowhere to go with their questions and fear, so they hide their secret shameful feelings of unworthiness as a Christian, afraid that God's grace has a limit.

Church becomes a place of condemnation not redemption, and this makes me furious. It shouldn't be that way. That's not what God had in mind when he created the church.

Church should be a safe place, a soft place. I'm not talking about a place where sin is affirmed and celebrated, but where sinners are accepted and loved, and even where it's famously taught that everyone, from those in the pews to those who preach from the pulpit, are sinners, too.

That's the only way the church will be a healing place for people like Lisa from Louisiana — people like you, people like me.

There truly is therefore no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus. That's where the healing starts. It begins with believing that if God says we are right with him, then we are. If Jesus said no one can snatch us from his hand, then we are safe and secure.

Imagine what the local church would be like if all sermons started with that. There might be fewer people writing desperate letters to strangers for help and more people offering hope to those sitting next to them in the pew.

People outside the church would notice. They already notice whatever we do, especially when we get it wrong.

EDITORIAL

Bipartisan acceptance is rare and should be sought after

Crit Luallen, the featured speaker at this evening's annual Nelson County Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, has earned something rare and unique in Kentucky politics — bipartisan admiration for the job she did while serving two terms as Kentucky State Auditor.

She was a “let the chips fall where they may” office holder that made no party distinction in going after corruption and questionable spending practices by government agencies and office holders on the state and local levels. Her ethics were simple, “do the right thing.” We can only hope that her successor, Adam Edelen, was paying attention during the time he was serving on her staff.

Luallen comes by her penchant for public service honestly. She is a descendant of not one, but two Kentucky governors — John J. Crittenden and Luke Blackburn. She started her career in politics in 1974 working for the campaign staff of Wendell Ford. Prior to her election in 2003 as auditor, her highest profile position was chief operating officer of Kentucky as Secretary of the Governor's Executive Cabinet. Along the way she was state Budget Director, Secretary of Finance and Administration, Secretary of the Tourism Cabinet, Commissioner of Arts and a special assistant to the governor. Her fingerprints can also be found on the Kentucky Education Reform Act of 1997, the EMPOWER program and the Agriculture Development Board that helps establish how the tobacco settlement funds are used in Kentucky.

With those kind of credentials it might seem odd that she did not seek an elective post until she ran for Auditor and has no announced plans for any future run. Not that there has been a lack of speculation. A successful bout with cancer probably resulted in a few revised plans for the Frankfort native but insiders believe her eye is looking toward succeeding Steve Beshear as Kentucky governor. She has also been mentioned as a possible candidate for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Mitch McConnell but with her familiarity with the workings of state government, the position of Governor would have to be considered a more comfortable fit.

Meanwhile, Kentucky Republicans have their own rising star in the person of James Comer, elected last fall as State Agriculture Commissioner. Comer is also being perceived as non-partisan in his approach to doing his job. Perhaps it is because his predecessor, Ritchie Farmer, has been such an easy act to follow but we suspect that Comer is the real thing, a gifted administrator who enjoys public service.

Self-discover, by fate or by choice

When the Russian novelist Fyodor Dostoevsky was arrested April 23, 1849, he and other members of a secret utopian society were sentenced to death by the Tsar Nikolai I. Dostoevsky was imprisoned for eight months in the Petropavlovsky Fortress — an island in St. Petersburg, whose broad plaza is inlaid with a million small stones carried in the pockets and satchels of serfs from every corner of Russia, whom Alexander the Great ordered to construct and populate St. Petersburg, the city of his invention. There were not enough stones in Petersburg to do the job.

Such was the power of Russia's tsars. (Nikolai's son, Alexander II, would free the serfs and die after seven assassination attempts for doing so.)

So when it was Nikolai's will that Dostoevsky and his compatriots should be reprieved, it was also his ruling that the reprieve should be announced only at the moment after these men were marched before the firing squad. It was the tsar's order, and it was done.

Their death sentence was

REPORTER
» emccoy@kystandard.com

read aloud; they kissed a cross. And when they were reprieved, their sentence instead was eight years of penal servitude in Siberia.

Yet Dostoevsky did not despair — how could he? In a letter to his brother after the reprieve, it seemed he was not sorrowful at all, even as he was on the verge of being banished from his home for what would ultimately be 10 years.

He wrote:

“Brother, I'm not depressed and haven't lost spirit. Life everywhere is life, life is in ourselves and not in the external, and to be a human being among human beings, and remain one forever, no matter what misfortunes befall, not to become depressed, and not to falter — this is what life is, herein lies its task. I have come to recognize this. This idea has entered into my flesh and blood. Yes, it's true!”

Still, I fear we are of a different generation — while America is still a difficult place for many (minorities, the poor) others of us have not faced the caliber of trials that Dostoevsky did — nor would we desire them for ourselves or others.

But who we really are is best revealed when we are wrung so tightly that only our true selves remain. In a world where access to entertainment and distraction is constant, where information is so commonly mistaken for wisdom, how often do we need to confront ourselves at all? And when we don't know who we are, how can we know our dreams enough to achieve them?

Nor do we live in servitude — decisions were made for the serfs or for America's African-American slaves, and today we make decisions for ourselves. We cannot conceive of a forced exodus, our pockets full of stones. Our decisions can define who we are, it's true — or they can simply define who we're not. I decide not to go to college. I decide not to be a carpenter. I decide not to move out of my hometown. Who I have become is a process of elimination.

There are those who argue that having more choices makes us less happy — with a dozen varieties of apples to choose from at the grocery store, we will always wonder if the other type was better than the one we picked. It was a sort of fate that sent Dostoevsky a message — his own volition did not bring it to him.

No, I don't wish for that sort of fate. But perhaps it is even more difficult now for us to find our paths in the world — because a thousand more paths are at our disposal, because the consequences of making a mistake are less dire. We are lucky. But every successful mind must chose its path sooner or later.

Call me 'Lord of the Doughnut Ring'

My girlfriend thinks I'm a hobbit.

I'm not particularly short or rotund. It's not that.

It's my eating habits.

Really, it comes down to one remark I made.

Though I love doughnuts I made a comment one time when Rebecca suggested them for breakfast that I would eat them but needed something more substantial first. Doughnuts, I told her, are breakfast dessert.

Yeah, I called them breakfast dessert. She found that amusing. Very amusing.

It was like I had called it “second breakfast” or “elevensies” or something else one of the hobbits from the “Lord of the Rings” trilogy would have piped up with. And it does sound like that.

But it was also a logical designation in my mind.

Doughnuts are sweet and made to be eaten as a treat, as far as I'm concerned.

I don't kid myself that

ROBERT VILLANUEVA

GUEST COLUMNIST
» rvillanueva@thenewsenterprise.com

these are a healthy meal first thing in the morning. They're not meant to be, either.

That doesn't mean I haven't eaten them by themselves for breakfast. I just generally prefer to have something with more substance, such as eggs, bacon or sausage, to begin the day.

Doughnuts are a great finish to such a breakfast.

And, like any food, the consumption of doughnuts is not something I consider limited to a certain meal. Like many others I know, I can eat breakfast foods for lunch or supper, and I have even eaten lunch or supper foods for breakfast.

In short, doughnuts are a good treat anytime. I've had them day and night and don't have a problem with that.

I've even put whipped topping on doughnuts I bought from the grocery store. It just seemed like the right thing to do at the time and further solidified in my mind the idea that doughnuts are a dessert.

Rebecca brings up the term breakfast dessert quite a bit, too.

Recently she found a recipe for an old southern dish her mom used to make when she was a kid: chocolate biscuits. Basically it's a chocolate sauce poured over biscuits, but it had to have the right consistency. She had tried a recipe previously that was not the same as she remembered.

This recent recipe discovery required a test run and modification, but she got it the way she remembered it.

When she made it, she was sure to tell me she was creating something for breakfast dessert and had something more substantial for main breakfast.

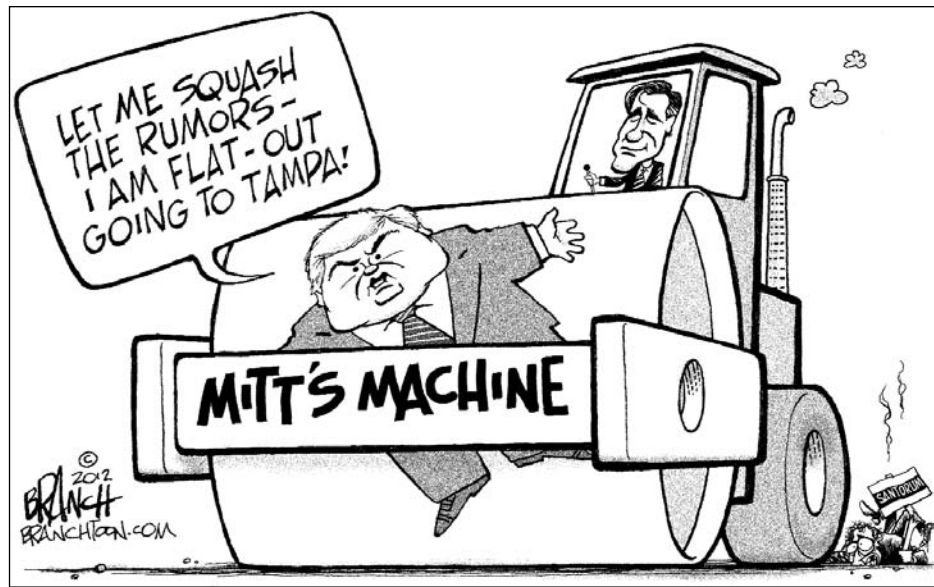

Breakfast dessert, apparently, is a term we will keep in our vocabulary. And that's not such a bad thing.

Given my predilection for doughnuts, I likely will enjoy many breakfast desserts to come.

And while I laugh at Rebecca's comparisons of me to a Tolkein character, I must admit sometimes I can see how I might resemble a creature from one of those novels, like when I see a ring of dough, all deep-fried and sweet, speaking to me of its powdery power, just waiting to be possessed by one who can appreciate its sugary goodness.

My precious.

The 'Week of the Young Child'

To the editor:
Young children in Bardstown and Nelson County deserve the best that we can give them.
The "Week Of the Young Child" — April 22-28 — is a time to recognize the needs of young children and to thank the adults involved in their education and care. Parents, grandparents, teachers, caregivers, and other adults play important roles in the lives of young children, and the "Week of the Young Child" celebrates their efforts.
We can show support for early learning in our community by promoting early literacy programs, thanking teachers who care for our children, and working to ensure that our public policies support early learning for all young children.
This special week is a time to remind us that "Early Years are Learning Years."

May 11 has been set aside as "Childcare Provider Appreciation Day." Please let those special adults who care for your children know how much they mean to you and your family.

>> NOTES OF THANKS

St. Vincent says thanks to United Way

To the editor:
St. Vincent de Paul Mission Store and Food Pantry would like to thank United Way of Nelson County and its generous donors for the $15,000 grant. This donation makes it possible to provide basic hygiene items — toothpaste, toothbrushes, shampoo, deodorant, dish detergent and laundry detergent — that cannot be purchased with food stamps. With the rising cost of gas and food items, this help is greatly appreciated. The economic decline is still with us regardless of what Washington Bureaucrats say. Members of the United Way board have a tremendous job in deciding where the money is to be distributed and again we would want to thank you for all your hard work.

United Way says thanks to its donors

To the editor:
It was brought up at our last Board of Directors meeting that while we have received numerous letters and other messages of thanks for our financial assistance to our 20 charitable agencies serving Nelson County, we have to humbly defer this thanks to our donors. We simply serve as a tool for the many workers and other contributors in our great county who genuinely want to help out their family, friends and neighbors in this community and find we are the best method to make this happen.
From big agencies such as the Red Cross to smaller agencies such as Compassionate Friends, a support group for those who have lost a loved one, we try to reflect the wishes of those who provide the finances.
So as we accept thanks and gratitude for helping others, we are always eternally grateful for those who donate through payroll deduction at work or through some other means. We have discovered a secret that is not too secret, when all of us work together, donate together, as a group united, we can accomplish so much more than as individuals. Thank you does not seem to be an adequate return, but for those who give, it is more than for what they even ask.

Cards rally in last at-bat to top WC

pzubaty@kystandard.com

Sometimes, a little bit of faith is all you need.

Nelson County, mired in a slow start to the season where the Cardinals dropped 10 of their first 12 games and down 3-2 to district rival Washington County, rallied for a 4-3 win Tuesday in the bottom of the seventh, getting a walk-off single by Ashley Seaman to improve to 2-0 in the 19th District race.

“Early in the season, we weren’t hitting the ball and we weren’t playing good defense,” coach John Rogers said. “The defense has come around, and they’re starting to have faith in their hitting.”

The Cardinals (3-10) have just three returnees who saw any varsity playing time last season, and the growing pains have been tough against the team’s typically demanding schedule.

“We’ve got as much talent as anybody we’ve played,” Rogers said, “but we don’t have any experience at all.”

On Tuesday, the squad took a big step forward.

Washington County (3-7 overall, 2-1 dist.) got on the board first by way of an error and a sacrifice fly to take a 1-0 lead in the top of the first, but Nelson County tied it up when Rachel Proctor’s RBI single capped off a three-hit inning.

STUDENT-ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

On the record with: NCHS’ Rachel Proctor

Nelson County softball player Rachel Proctor is this week’s nominee for The Kentucky Standard/PLG-TV 13 Student-Athlete of the Week.

Proctor, a senior, carries a 4.0 GPA and plans to attend St. Catharine College to study radiography upon graduation. She serves as vice-president of the NCHS chapter of Health Occupation Students of America, and is also an active member of her church’s youth group.

Kentucky Standard sports editor Peter W. Zubaty had some questions for Proctor to better get to know her.

RP: Ironically I enjoy watching college softball.

PZ: What got you started in softball?

RP: I started playing T-ball at the age of 5 and loved it ever since.

PZ: Do you have a favorite pre-game meal?

RP: Pizza or subway would probably be my favorite pre-game meal.

PZ: How great would it be to win the district the last year before the NCHS-Thomas Nelson split? Do you feel a lot of pressure to keep the district title streak going?

RP: It would be awesome to win the 22nd consecutive district title this year before the NCHS/Thomas Nelson High School split. However, I believe the streak will continue even after Thomas Nelson opens.

PZ: What’s your favorite song/album? Who’s your favorite band/artist?

RP: “Remind Me” by Brad Paisley in the bottom of the second when Hallie Mattingly — who went 4-for-4 in the game on the heels of a 3-for-3 JV outing — drove in Katrina Boone to make it 2-1.

That gave Cardinal pitcher Alex Newton a cushion to work with, and the junior struck out four and allowed just two hits in innings two through five. But Newton ran into trouble in the sixth as the Commanders rallied for two runs on three hits to take a 3-2 lead.

Seaman, the Cardinals' junior catcher, said the team has had trouble at times reacting to pressure situations.

"I kind of feel like we are more precautions and make more mistakes," in those spots, she said. "It makes us think more."

Newton gathered herself and pitched a 1-2-3 top of the seventh, setting the table for the comeback.

"Having them keep the faith and not push the panic button when we get behind" is key, Rogers said.

Emily Feltner led off the bottom of the seventh with a single and was bunted over. Mattingly followed with a hot shot that Commander shortstop Olivia Goatley was unable to handle, and the bases were loaded when Newton drew a walk.

Savannah Ballard came up next with a grounder to Goatley, who threw home for the force, but Feltner was safe when catcher Emily Seger's foot was pulled off the plate, tying it at 3-3. Seaman then won the game when she deposited an 0-2 pitch from Hannah Coulter into right field for the walk-off single, scoring Mattingly.

"It feels good (to win a game like this), especially when we've been struggling," Seaman said. "It definitely brings your confidence up."

Rogers said the team has talked at length about winning the mental part of games and matching the intensity that district rivals bring to the table against the Cardinals, who have won 21 consecutive district crowns.

"Any time we can win a district game when we've got the target on our back, it's big," he said. "Plus, it sends the other team a message."

Seaman said she hopes the win can be a turning point for the team.

"I think this win and having this energy, it will help us," she said.

Nelson County visited Taylor County Thursday after press time for this edition. The Cardinals return home Monday to face Spencer County in the hopes of avenging a 4-2 road loss in March.

Family looks for gentle way to ease away from grandpa

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 16 years and have two teenagers. "Mom" died two years ago, and my husband is an only child. How can we tell my widowed father-in-law that we need a weekend to ourselves?

"Pop," who's 87, lives an hour away and drives to see us every weekend, staying until Monday afternoon. We don't doubt that he's lonely, although he does play bridge twice a week and has dinner with friends occasionally. We love him dearly and would never want to hurt his feelings, but we long for a weekend for "just us."

How do we ask Pop not to visit? We believe he's still in mourning over the loss of his wife of 60 years. We don't want to add to his heartache.

TORN IN TEXAS
DEAR TORN: You do need to talk with your father-in-law and set some boundaries. Accomplish it by setting a predetermined visitation schedule that allows you time alone with your husband and nuclear family without him being present. A way to get that message across would be to say: "Pop, we love you, but we need some time to ourselves, so let's schedule your visits for twice a month. YOU pick the weekends."

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY: The neighbor above my apartment has a snoring problem. My bedroom is directly below his. Around 10 every night he starts snoring to the point that it sounds like an elephant lives above me. I have to sleep with my TV on and sometimes the radio.

Please tell me what to do. Should I confront this neighbor? Should I complain to management? Or should I just live with it?

FED UP IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR FED UP: Write your neighbor a letter and explain to him there is a problem. He may not know that he snores. If he's snoring steadily, but stops for 20 or 30 seconds before starting again, it could indicate that he has a serious medical condition that should be discussed with his doctor.

If the apartment above you has poor insulation, a carpet under his bed could muffle some of the sound. Playing a tape of "white noise" could block it out more restfully than your television or radio. Or, because adequate sleep is so important, you could ask a real estate attorney about the possibility of breaking your lease and leaving without penalty.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman who will graduate from college soon. I am looking to undergo a post-college makeover. I want to find some clothes that will work in the professional world, but also mix for more casual environments. Taking a recent college grad's budget for this into account, what signature pieces should a young female have in her wardrobe? And what tips do you have for building a great collection over time?

YOUNG, BROKE, BUT FABULOUS

DEAR Y.B.F.: Start with two suits — one with a jacket and matching skirt, the other with jacket and slacks. Make both suits interchangeable and in a neutral color — black, navy or beige — whatever looks best on you. Add a couple of blouses and sweater sets, several pairs of shoes and a good handbag. Make sure to look for "classic" styles rather than trendy, and you will have the basis for a business wardrobe and the beginning of a great collection.

>> HOROSCOPES

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You might feel as if everyone is throwing boulders in your path. Surprise! You'll just skip over them as you clear out a lot of issues. You have an unusual opportunity to start the weekend early. Tonight: Join friends dinner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ How you deal with a commitment could change. Use your excellent sense of timing. Your fatigue with the status quo comes through. Others finally agree with you, once they get your logic. Tonight: Out and about.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Keep reaching out for an important person in your life. You might feel as if you could lose the connection between you. That won't happen if you relax and refrain from standing on ceremony. The other party will sense a change in your perspective. Tonight: Order in.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Rethink a personal decision. Deal with others on a one-on-one level. You might not be sure about what you want. Once you can nail that down, you will have a sympathetic audience. Tonight: Be around music.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Stay mellow, despite what is going on. Others seek you out, but they might not be as positive or upbeat as you would like. In fact, you might need to deal with someone who is depressed. You could be surprised by how much anger this person unleashes. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Remain sure of yourself. Recognize that someone who always makes you feel a bit insecure could be projecting his or her issues onto you. If you have kept a situation bottled up for too long, do not be surprised if you let it out now. Tonight: Pace yourself, and do not push.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Curb any negativity, and you'll make yourself and others happier. Sometimes, by not feeding into negativity, you can move through your feelings quickly. Allow lighter thoughts with more mirth to come out. Tonight: Play up the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ If you can take some much-needed personal time, please do. You have pushed past what is normal. Note the slant you put on different solutions. Look at the same issues next week at a happier moment. Tonight: Go shopping.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Listen to news, return calls and ask questions. You might understand why someone has been pushing you away. Realize that you cannot do anything to change the situation. Tonight: Hang out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Sometimes you need to build yourself up to make yourself feel better. Today, take stock of what you have done this week and all that you have to offer, and reconsider a judgment. You are your harshest critic. Decide to toss yourself 100 percent into all areas of your life. Tonight: Meet a friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Consider your options more openly. The feedback you get during a discussion with your friends might surprise you. A friend or loved one finally tells you exactly where he or she is coming from. This person could surprise you. Tonight: Be spontaneous.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ If you're feeling off, just say so. Everyone needs some time off from their lives. You are no exception. Listen to a friend and what he or she says. This person is trying to help you out. Allow others to carry the ball. Tonight: Play it low-key.
